REGULATING SOBER LIVING HOMES-A BICOASTAL PERSPECTIVE

By: Terrill C. Pyburn, City Attorney, Coconut Creek, Florida, and Norman A. Dupont, Partner, Ring Bender LLP, Newport Beach, California

There is general consensus that co-locating those battling substance abuse in residential settings can help rehabilitation. But communities rarely welcome sober homes into their midst. Laws at the federal, state, and local levels protect recovery facilities against measures aimed at excluding them and codify standards of care for the treatment of recovering residents.

WHAT EVERY MUNICIPAL ATTORNEY SHOULD KNOW ABOUT THE FIRST AMENDMENT

By: Roger Horner and Ian Williams, Senior Specialists and Legal Editors, Thomson Reuters Practical Law Government Practice Service

No prerogatives are more fundamental to American democracy than those guaranteed by the First Amendment. Whether safeguarding speech, press, or religion, the right to assembly and petition, or a corollary right recognized by the Supreme Court—the freedom of association—local government lawyers are responsible for ensuring that each is protected.
